For the Best Room in the House..!

Spring, 2003 • Volume 1, Issue 1

This has been one nasty winter, but the forecast for spring looks great. Interest rates are low, and with the state of our economy your home has proven to be one of your most secure investments. And making your home better can only improve its value.

When we began eight years ago, we focused on providing the finest three and four season patio rooms available. Over the last few years Eagle has evolved into being a full service remodeling company that also offers kitchen and bath remodeling, window replacements and room additions.

We have had the good fortune to work with over 600 of the nicest people anyone could ever meet, to help improve their homes.

We invite you to take a look at the first issue of our newsletter. It's fun and has good information to share. If you would like your home to be featured in an upcoming issue give us a call at 614-326-0011.

Enjoy the warm spring weather, and thank you for allowing us the opportunity to help improve your home and hopefully your lives.

Testimonials:

"They built our patio room in a very timely fashion. Whenever we called them to come out to change or fix something, they were there either that day or the next day. If we ever need other work to be done, we would definitely consider Eagle."

— Joan & Smith Mitchell

"We got several estimates from different companies. All of the prices were very competitive, but Eagle's materials seemed to be better quality. They did an excellent job, but it was really their customer skills that sold us."

— Marvin & Judy Ellis

"We chose Eagle because of its honest sales approach. They were very sincere. They weren't pushy to the point where you wondered about their product. They did an excellent job."

— Jack & Debbie Spencer

The goal of Eagle Specialty Remodeling is best expressed by owner Scott Carskadon...

"When the homeowner tells you that it's better than they ever expected."

Child Home Safety Tips for Parents

Childproof Your Home.

The best way to find dangers your child or grandchild might encounter is to explore your home at her level by getting down on your hands and knees. Cover every room, asking yourself what looks tempting and what is within reach (between the floor and about 40 inches above). Also, check carpets for buried dangers like pins or coins.

Childproofing can never be 100 percent effective. That's why it's so important to supervise your children at all times, especially around water, in the kitchen and bathroom, and wherever known hazards exist.

Childproofing Basics

Kitchen:

Keep hot foods and liquids away from young children. Use the back burners on the stove and turn pot handles toward the back of the stove. Keep glassware, knives, appliance cords, placemats and tablecloths out of reach and away from the edge of counters and tables.

Bathroom:

Set hot water heater thermostat no higher than 120 degrees to reduce the chance of scald burns. It takes just three seconds for a child to sustain a third degree burn from water at 140 degrees.

Lock medicine cabinets. Even items as seemingly harmless as iron pills and mouthwash can be dangerous for a young child.

Install toilet locks. Unlike adults, children's weight is concentrated in the top half of their bodies. When they lean into a toilet bowl, they may lose their balance, fall forward and drown in as little as 1 inch of water.

Request child-resistant packaging. But keep in mind that child-resistant containers are not childproof. These medicines still need to be locked up out of a child's reach.

Remove sharp utensils and appliances. Razors, scissors and blow dryers are better kept in an adult's bedroom, locked out of children's reach.

Bedroom:

Beware of old cribs. Baby furniture built even a decade ago might not meet some of today's safety standards. Sharp edges, corner post protrusions and dangerously spaced slats can be deadly.

Keep cribs and low-standing furniture (beds, bookshelves, toy boxes, chairs) away from windows, preferably against another wall. Infants and toddlers can pull on inner blind cords creating loops large enough to pull around their necks and strangle.

Around The House:

Check for fire hazards. Look for frayed electrical wires or flammable materials near heat sources such as space heaters. Never run electrical cords under rugs. Make sure that your home, and any home your child visits, has working smoke alarms in every sleeping area and on every level.

Install carbon monoxide detectors in every sleeping area and check batteries often.

Use safety gates at the top and bottom of stairs to keep infants and toddlers out of harm's way.

Cover all unused electrical outlets.

If firearms are kept in the house, keep them locked, unloaded and stored out of reach. Secure ammunition in a separate, locked location.

Install window guards on all windows that are not emergency exits.

For Emergencies:

Post emergency numbers by telephones. Poison control center, pediatrician, police, fire department, emergency medical services and a neighbor's by every telephone. Also, clearly post the home address so that parents, caregivers, and children can easily tell emergency personnel how to locate the home.

Keep first aid supplies on hand. Have a 1 ounce bottle of ipecac syrup for each of your children, but use it only on the advice of the poison control center or a physician.
